A sister of [redacted] was present. In private conversation she said that she was surprised that [redacted] was not present. She had told him about the service.

At the reception [redacted] was laughingly telling a group about young fellows he was defending. In court they were disrupting the court proceedings. When the judge got them quiet, a couple of them applauded. The judge said they were in contempt of court. They said the judge was in contempt of their rights. They were taken out in handcuffs.

A news item recently appeared in the "Washington Post and Times Herald" indicating that I. F. Stone, apparently referring to captioned individual, would deliver the commencement address at Amherst College in early June, 1970. One copy of that item is enclosed for your assistance in this matter.

Arrangements are to be made by your office to obtain a copy of the address of I. F. Stone, which is referred to in the enclosed news item. Furnish same to the Bureau as promptly as possible.

This action is to be handled in a manner to preclude embarrassment to the Bureau.

For your information, Stone is on the Security Index of the Washington Field Office (WFO). He resides in Washington, D. C., and publishes "I. F. Stone's Weekly," an independent newsletter dealing with current events. Our files reveal that Stone has consistently espoused interests of Communist Party front groups in his writings and has participated in numerous communist front activities over the years. He has been a long-time critic of the FBI and other Federal organizations concerned with security investigations. His publication has been the principal vehicle for Stone's vicious attacks against officials, agencies and policies of the United States Government.

I.F. Stone, seniors' choice, warns commencement:'A large military establishment has to find work to do.'

I.F. Stone, editor of the liberal weekly that bears his name, began his Amherst College graduation talk: "Commencement addresses are usually a mixture of inane cheer and smug self-satisfaction ... 1970 is likely to be a very poor vintage year for commencement addresses." The audience in the college athletic cage laughed.

"How does one explain at the same time the anguish of the young and the bewilderment of older people?" he asked in his soft voice, which many had trouble hearing.

"The two greatest military men who have been President each warned against the military establishment." Both Washington and Eisenhower spoke warnings against the military in their farewell addresses. "Never have we had so overgrown a military establishment as we have now."

"The anarchic forces at loose in the world require some armed forces at our disposal, but not of the nature we have today," Stone said.

"A large military establishment has to find work to do. It will also look for military solutions to complex problems. The 'solutions' used in Southeast Asia can be transferred to home," he warned. "Our instinct is to react to problems with force. That is why we are in trouble."

"It is very hard to walk around a beautiful town like Amherst, and to realize what our country has done to others' peaceful villages and quiet lives. It is hard to see that our country is linked to destruction."

"An industrial nation thinks in terms of destruction. In a complex situation all we do is destroy and make ourselves into some kind of monster. This was not our intention, but that is what happens in trying to solve a political problem by military means."

HISTORY OF THE WAR

"Roosevelt and Churchill during World War II discussed the principles for the post-war world. Included was the democracies' respect of the right of colonial peoples to self-government. As late as 1949, Secretary of State Dean Acheson announced that 'we would not defend colonial rule.'"

"Then we began to slip. We entered the Korean war. It is worth remembering that in 1954 it was Nixon who wanted to continue the French war in Vietnam, and that it was Eisenhower who ended the Korean war on the northern flank of China. This encouraged the French to 'get out' on China's southern end."

"Nixon wanted a path to war. The latest example is the Cambodian operation. It was worthwhile to let Prince Sihanouk not stay in Cambodia, keeping each side from the country. Certainly I feel that our secret services encouraged the overthrow of Sihanouk."

"The Pentagon strategy was expressed in an off-the-record press meeting about which I heard two years ago. General Westmoreland said the plan was to reduce the fighting force in Southeast Asia to the amount of casualties that the American people would accept for a long, long time."

YOUTH AND AGE

"This is my first academic degree (he had three years at University of Pennsylvania but did not graduate. -- Ed.) and my first commencement address. I've barely reached 30 for the second time," he noted with a grin.

"How can we adjust to the technological necessities around us when we can't adjust to the long hair on the heads of young men?" he asked the audience of parents and grandparents.

"This is one of the greatest generations of young people the world has ever produced. They -- the young people from well-to-do families -- are revolting against other peoples' poverty. Suddenly we find them seeking sacrifice and hardship in VISTA, the Peace Corps, working for SNCC. There is no country in the world where as many young people are concerned about moral questions. We are very lucky to have that kind of a generation."

WORDS TO THE YOUNG

He had words too for the graduates. "Don't spell 'America' with a 'k' (the student left often spells 'Amerika' the way it is spelled in German -- Ed.)

We always say that generals end up fighting the old war, the one which preceded the present one. We liberals on the left are in danger of doing this too. Students say that Richard Nixon is Adolf Hitler; that is nonsense. Things are bad but we should not make things worse with slipshod analogies."

"America is not fascist," said the veteran liberal editor. "In a fascist country could I give speeches in government buildings and criticize its policies?" He said he had given five speeches to government workers in government buildings, attacking the war, during last November's "Moratorium."

"Hysteria is not a good form of politics. There is no future in polarizing our country. We don't have any instant revolutionary solutions. The basic problems of war, racism, and poverty exist in countries all over the world -- Nigeria, Israel, Singapore and Malaysia. There is much racism in Poland and the Soviet Union. I have spent my life criticizing these things wherever they are."

BATTLE BETWEEN GOOD, EVIL

"An ancient Persian proverb says, 'Life is a constant battle between good and evil powers.' In every man there is the good and the bad; one kind of leadership can mobilize the good, another kind mobilizes the bad," said Stone.

"You live in a great country," he told the graduates. "Visit the Soviet Union and see how little freedom they have. The next generation will see a tremendous revival of the Jeffersonian spirit in the world."

"Look at the American melting pot. Then look at Tito and Yugoslavia where he can't get the Serbs and the Croats together. Mexican-Americans and others who come here bring new qualities to us."

"We either learn to live together or we have no future. More Kent States, more persecution of Black Panthers will only bring greater trouble."

"This is not inevitable," he urged the graduates. "Mobilize the conscience of the nation!"

"To bring about peace requires a certain amount of forgiveness," he added. "Men are prisoners of the institutions in which they work. The Pentagon is full of decent people. They are caught in the institution. We have to cut the Pentagon down to size."

"Our country is now imperialist. Know history! In 1898 there was an Anti-Imperialist League in this country with two former Presidents active in it. They opposed annexation of the Philippines because they thought it would be the beginning of a march into Asia which would ultimately undermine our freedom at home."

"We are very fortunate to have a generation like the present one to begin work on the tasks that face us." He sat down to loud applause from both graduates and their more conservative parents.

Editor Stone chosen by seniors

According to "The Amherst Student," after Amherst seniors picked I. F. Stone as the man they would like to hear at their commencement, President Plimpton extended the invitation. On returning from spring vacation, a member of the student commencement committee learned that Stone had turned down the invitation.

Investigating, the student learned that the invitation had been extended with the suggestion that the talk would be "about 15 minutes." Izzy Stone's reaction to that was reported to be: "That's a long way to go just to talk for 15 minutes." In any case this was ironed out and the time suggestion on the speech removed. Stone came. Most of the students were delighted. He talked for 32 minutes.

Each year more people get to know Stone's views, yet he still is no rival of a Severeid or a Lippman, as far as renown is concerned.

His rapport with students, and others, of liberal views is based on "I. F. Stone's Weekly." This four-page newsletter-size publication gives Stone's culling of selected, often little reported items, from the news. Pieces may come from the Congressional Record, "Le Monde," the Manchester Guardian, or many other sources. In addition to rarely reported facts, Stone will often write an essay which views the current political scene. The Weekly, which he founded in 1953, has a circulation of 25,000.

Stone has been writing since 14. He was a reporter and editorial writer for Philadelphia dailies for 26 years; editor of "The Nation" (1938-46), a columnist for PM and the New York Star.

In Amherst last week he had a two and a half hour informal meeting on Thursday with students in addition to his commencement speech.

On Friday he spoke and received his first college degree, an honorary doctor of humane letters from Amherst; he attended University of Pennsylvania for three years but did not graduate.

Amherst Graduates Told Have Faith In America

AMHERST—Amherst College graduated 288 in traditional ceremonies at the College Cage Friday.

The senior class's most famous member, David Eisenhower, did not appear to receive his degree, cum laude, in political science.

Eisenhower had objected to the choice of Leftist Journalist I. F. Stone as commencement speaker, fearing that Stone's remarks might cause embarrassment to his relatives.

Stone was as free with his praise for the late Dwight D. Eisenhower as he was with his criticism of President Richard Nixon. David is son-in-law of Nixon and grandson of Eisenhower.

Path of Peace

In the mid-fifties, Stone said, then Vice President Richard Nixon had wanted to keep the Korean War going, but Eisenhower "took the path of peace."

In defending his administration's stand on the war in Vietnam, Nixon was quoted by Stone as saying that this country "must not be a pitiful, helpless giant."

The journalist said that in one sense, this country is already what Nixon hopes to keep it from becoming.

In its Latin origin, Stone said, the word "impotent" meant a lack of control not a lack of strength.

"Our country is truly impotent," he said. "The overgrown military establishment is out of control and is a detriment to society."

Stone said that large military establishments have a tendency to race away from controls in order to find a justification for their existence.

Get Into Trouble

"When you have a large military establishment, you're going to get into trouble," he said.

He pointed out that "it is very hard for us to realize what our war has done to other continents" in terms of destruction.

"We're a large industrial nation; we fight wars on a mass production scale. We're masters of demolition. This is not so bad when the country you're fighting is also a large industrial nation, as in Europe, but in 'civil war' situations all we do is destroy and embitter."

☐ Being Investigated

"Victory is impossible" he quoted General William Westmoreland, former chief military officer in Vietnam, as saying in a background briefing that casualties were going to be reduced so that the American people would tolerate a long, long war.

Young people, said Stone, are showing that they are more idealistic than their parents. People are finding that jobs with low salaries and social relevance are more popular than ordinary jobs with high salaries.

No Violence

He urged liberals to refrain from the violent tactics of Vice President Agnew in working for their causes.

"We on the left could fight the war all over again," he said. "This country has very grave problems, great faults, but there's no sense making things worse.

"America is not fascist. It's a free country . . . there aren't many countries where a person can speak in a government building and speak against the government," Stone said.

"It's important not to lose one's perspective. There's no future in polarization. There's no future in a civil war. This silly talk about revolution — we don't have an easy solution.

"The evils of this country — war, poverty, racism — are problems of mankind. They exist in every civilization . . . everywhere we look we find people hating and fighting each other for their differences," Stone said.

Persons who talk about the immorality of the war and racism, he said, begin to sound like an old-fashioned Baptist preacher at a revival.

Downright Attractive

"He talks so much about sin that he makes it downright attractive," he declared.

"It's a great country," he said, pointing out that repression is much more evident in countries such as Poland and the Soviet Union.

"The best thing our country can do for the world is to set a good example," Stone said.

In brief remarks, Amherst College President Calvin H. Plimpton urged students and faculty to solve their problems through persuasion without creating crises to raise issues.

Dr. Plimpton noted that "in the past 13 months, we have allowed, and even aided and abetted, the near closing of this college on three separate occasions.

These questions, he said, should be raised directly.

"May you, through persuasion, serve to pull the world up to a better condition?" he said.

Was Praised

Dr. Plimpton, who submitted his resignation this week, effective at the end of the next academic year, was praised by Oliver Merrill, chairman of the Amherst College Board of Trustees.

"We would like to express our greatest reluctance and regret on Dr. Plimpton's resignation . . . and gratitude for all he has done in the last decade for his college and ours," Merrill said.

Although about a third of the graduating seniors wore anti-war armbands, and some dispensed with caps and gowns, the ceremony remained traditional.

Only a handful raised hands in clenched fists and peace symbols during the National Anthem, and all stood.

When Dwight David Eisenhower, III was awarded his degree in absentia, the audience burst forth with a steady round of applause and a few hisses and boos.

One graduate, Philip Lerou Durrett of Quincy, Ill., prompted a wide grin of amusement from Dr. Plimpton when he presented himself for his diploma with a fetching baby girl under one arm.

Honorary degrees were awarded to commencement speaker Stone, founder, editor and publisher of I. F. Stone's weekly, for his "Contributions to American Society, American Life, and American Policy."

Hampshire College President Franklin Patterson received an honorary Doctor of Laws.

"Long an expert on secondary schools, you have created a college, you have taken a dream and made it real, you have made a hope come true . . . you have had vision, and courage and energy, and all the colleges in this Valley are better for what you have done," he was told.

Also receiving an honorary Doctor of Laws was Luis Alberto Ferre, governor of Puerto Rico. He was cited as "an industrialist always concerned about the welfare of the worker — treating his fact as man, and not merely as employee . . . you have united new and old. East and West."

An honorary Doctor of Letters went to Stephen Walkley Grant, president of Houghton Mifflin Publishers.

"Publishing books has been described as 'The Art Preservative of Arts' — the most vital force in education . . . you have been lucky enough to make this a life work, and we have been lucky that you have been able to do it — and be so good at it" he was told.

Paul Augustus Raushenbush, developer of State and Federal Unemployment Compensation plans, was granted a Doctor of Humane Letters for "social legislation and practices that have benefitted the entire country" and "allowed a proper allocation of the social costs of jobless benefits."

Thomas Francis Eagleton, Amherst '50, and United States senator from Missouri, was awarded a Doctor of Laws for his "achievements" and his "promise."

"We agree with the Saturday Evening Post and Life Magazine that you are on your way up and remind you that it is all too long since an Amherst man has been a legitimate resident to the White House!" He was told.

City planner Ian Lennox McHarg was awarded a Doctor of Humane Letters for development of "a design not just for the survival of man but for the realization of his humanity and an approach to the potentials of man and his planet."

A Doctor of Humane Letters also was awarded to John Cushing Esty Jr., headmaster of the Taft School.

"You have demonstrated that the art of teaching, when most successful, depends upon suggestion — and that true leadership in teaching means service more than direction," he was told.

Stephen Cole Kleene, Amherst '30 and dean of the College of Letters and Science at the University of Wisconsin, was the recipient of a Doctor of Science.

"We have brought you here to pay tribute to one who identifies beauty in science, recognizes worthiness in teaching, and practices dignity in administration," he was told.

I. F. Stone Achieves Success, Respectability But Keeps Raking Muck

Influence Said to Be Rising;
Agnew Assails Newsletter,
White House Subscribes
'Sincere but Terribly Wrong'

By A. KENT MACDOUGALL

Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

WASHINGTON—I. F. Stone, tireless pamphleteer and senior leftist, is at age 62 coming into success and respectability. He has sought neither and is uncomfortable with both.

"It's a little embarrassing," he says.

After toiling for 17 years on his newsletter, I. F. Stone's Bi-Weekly, he now is being discovered by young and old alike. The liberal-to-radical young are looking to him as one of their few respected elders. Their moderate elders are saying perhaps he has been right all along, in his ceaseless criticism of U.S. war and armaments policies.

The circulation of Mr. Stone's $5-a-year newsletter has nearly tripled, to 60,000, in the past five years. He now is being read in all the best places: Forty subscriptions are sent to Capitol Hill offices, and the White House is among the recent subscribers.

Mr. Stone no longer is ignored by the people he attacks. Vice President Agnew, in criticizing the press, has lumped the newsletter with the New York Times and the Washington Post. The Bi-Weekly, the Vice President has said, is "another strident voice of illiberalism." David Eisenhower, the President's son-in-law, stayed away from his own graduation ceremonies at Amherst College last month because Mr. Stone was the commencement speaker.

Who's Who in America has recently reinstated Mr. Stone, after dropping him during the McCarthy era; a spokesman for the book says he doesn't know why Mr. Stone had been dropped. The New Yorker magazine recently quoted extensively from a speech he made last March at a Madison Square Garden peace rally. He now is a frequent guest on television talk shows. And a Canadian film-maker is producing a 25-minute documentary on him.

No Lunches With VIPs

But success and respectability don't seem to be spoiling Isidor Feinstein Stone. The maverick ~~muckraker~~ continues to rake muck. Nearly every issue of the four-page Bi-Weekly punches a hole in some policy statement or decision that much of the Washington press corps has taken at face value.

He still avoids friendships with Government officials. "They're all nice guys—even Nixon—but that's irrelevant," he says. He sees a danger in getting too cozy with news sources. "You've really got to wear a chastity belt in Washington to preserve your journalistic virginity. Once the Secretary of State invites you to lunch and asks your opinion, you're sunk."

Mr. Stone, who also writes frequently for the New York Review of Books, has two part-time editorial assistants now, but he puts out the Bi-Weekly almost singlehanded. Izzy Stone's forte has always been research, and he still spends much of every day reading periodicals and looking up facts. Each day he reads 10 newspapers, ranging from Le Monde to The Wall Street Journal, and he regularly culls dozens of magazines, including Air Force & Space Digest, the Economist and Peking Review. His home, a comfortable house in an upper-middle-class neighborhood in Washington's northwest side, is jammed with periodicals, Government documents and some 7,000 books. He works at home.

I. F. Stone remembers most of what he reads. Thus, when Defense Secretary Melvin Laird tells a Senate committee that Russia is "the only country in the world that has actually fired an ABM at a missile," Mr. Stone digs out an old hearing transcript that quotes Mr. Laird's predecessor, Clark Clifford, as telling the same committee that "as long as seven years ago we demonstrated we could with confidence destroy single incoming missiles." Mr. Stone also finds old newspaper clips disclosing an Army announcement of shooting down a missile with an ABM.

When he isn't pointing out contradictions, he is criticizing. He doesn't mince words. "Laird is Washington's biggest liar since John Foster Dulles," he wrote in May. And he is often eloquent. "(President) Hoover, like Nixon evaded decisions by appointing fact-finding commissions and then in turn evaded the facts when found," he wrote last month.

The Deaf Reporter

Mr. Stone attributes his habit of close reading and attention to detail to years of almost total deafness. "I went deaf in 1938, and it improved my reporting. I couldn't hear what was said at briefings and hearings, so I'd go around the next day to study the transcript. I'd catch things the guys who had listened and written on deadline had missed," he says. "Govern-

An I. F. Stone Sampler

WASHINGTON—I. F. Stone is a master of the lithy putdown. A sampler:

Lyndon B. Johnson — "He was a New Dealer when that was the road to power, he became a conservative when that was the way to stay in."

Richard M. Nixon — "Indecisive, weak and tricky, with neither the statesman's vision nor the politician's finesse."

ments lie, but they don't like to lie literally. They use corkscrew sentences and disingenuous statements, and you have to read these documents as though they were mortgage contracts drawn by a shyster lawyer."

Operations in 1964 and 1965 restored Mr. Stone's hearing, and he doesn't even need a hearing aid today. He wears thick glasses—the steel-rimmed spectacles give the plump and rumped Mr. Stone almost an owl's resemblance to Benjamin Franklin—and had to have a serious eye operation in 1967. He also suffered a heart attack in that year, but his health has been generally good since then and he vows to continue the Bi-Weekly for eight more years, until he is 70.

The world doesn't breathlessly await each new issue of the Bi-Weekly. Decision makers don't postpone decisions until reading Izzy Stone. Some respected people in Washington—liberals and conservatives—claim his words carry no weight.

Some other respected people here say that Mr. Stone is simply wrong on most counts. William S. White, syndicated political columnist and Pulitzer Prize-winning author, says: "I like and respect him. He's a man of complete sincerity and integrity. I just think he's terribly wrong. He has a manic obsession against the use of power, particularly military power."

Yet there is evidence that I. F. Stone's is an influential voice, and is becoming ever more so. Tom Wicker, political columnist and associate editor of the New York Times, says the Bi-Weekly and the underground press have influenced the daily commercial press "to be less officially oriented than we once were." Mr. Wicker says Mr. Stone is "one of the best writers and most courageous and perceptive journalists in town. Before any of us had the courage to think for ourselves, rather than take what the President said (at face value), he was doing it."

Mr. Stone says many Washington reporters still swallow Government pronouncements whole. He isn't invited to background briefings, and he says, "I save a hell of a lot of time by not going." Briefings are usually brainwashings, he claims, "attempts to sell the Government line and to shape the news." And he adds: "Establishment reporters undoubtedly know a lot of things I don't. But a lot of what they know isn't true."

Mr. Wicker, a reader of the Bi-Weekly since the early 1960s, is clearly a fan of the publication and its editor. Mr. Wicker says that Mr. Stone "has shown, more than most, the profound influence that personal journalism, divorced from big organizations and expense accounts, can have." Mr. Wicker says he used to think that Mr. Stone "was fairly far out, but not anymore."

Mr. Stone admits that he is not as "far out" as he was as a youth. In his adolescent days, he read Jack London, Peter Kropotkin, Karl Marx and other revolutionary writers and considered himself "a communist-anarchist." Today he calls himself "half a liberal, half a radical."

I. F. Stone has been involved in personal journalism ever since his adolescence. As a 14-year-old in Haddonfield, N.J., Izzy Feinstein (he added the "Stone" later) and a schoolmate published a five-cent monthly, The Progress. The paper was complete with ads, poetry and editorials attacking William Randolph Hearst and defending the League of Nations, and young Izzy peddled it around town on his bicycle. But his father, a Russian Jewish immigrant who owned a dry goods store in Haddonfield, ordered a halt after the third issue because it was hurting his son's school work.

Young Izzy was not a very good student. "I wanted to go to Harvard, but I finished 49th in my high school graduating class of 52," he says. "The University of Pennsylvania had open enrollment and had to take me." He was a philosophy major at Penn but dropped out in his junior year and never finished college.

"I was a New Lefty before there was a New Left," he says. "I didn't cut my hair, tie my ties or believe in college degrees. I believed you shouldn't do anything unless it was spontaneous and genuine."

Mr. Stone worked for Camden, N.J., and Philadelphia dailies in the late 1920s and early 1930s. After a stint on the New York Post, he went to Washington in 1940 as correspondent for the Nation magazine and subsequently for three ill-fated New York dailies—PM, the Star and the Compass.

When the Compass folded in 1952, Mr. Stone tried unsuccessfully to get his old job on the Nation back. Newspapers also seemed uninterested in hiring him. Inspired by the earlier success of crusading journalist George Seldes' newsletter In Fact, he launched the Weekly (changed to Bi-Weekly in 1967) with 5,300 customers obtained from his old newspapers' subscription lists.

A Check From Einstein

Early subscribers included Eleanor Roosevelt, Bertrand Russell and Albert Einstein. Mr. Einstein's $5 check for a one-year subscription is framed and on display in Mr. Stone's home.

Though the Cold War climate wasn't hospitable to Mr. Stone's new venture, he experienced no McCarthyite-style harassment. "I was fortunate enough to be born in a country with a tradition of a free press," he says. "There are very few countries in which you

The Radicals' Hero Hits Bomb-Throwing Tactics

By a WALL STREET JOURNAL Staff Reporter

WASHINGTON—I. F. Stone is a favorite among college radicals—"a major hero in the radical pantheon," according to Life magazine—but he is critical of some radicals' bomb-throwing tactics.

"Burning America down is no way to Utopia," he says.

What is the solution? He seems less sure than ever. "Lifelong dissent has more than acclimated me cheerfully to defeat," he wrote not so long ago. "It has made me suspicious of victory. I feel uneasy at the very idea of a Movement. I see every insight degenerating into a dogma, and fresh thoughts freezing into lifeless party line. Those who set out nobly to be their brother's keeper sometimes end up by becoming his jailer."

"Every emancipation has in it the seeds of a new slavery, and every truth easily becomes a lie."

can split in the eye of the Government and get away with it. It's not possible in Moscow."

Mr. Stone is as harsh on the Communists as he is on the capitalists. "I used to think that abolition of private property was the answer," he says. "I lost that faith when I saw what has happened in the Soviet bloc. The worker is more exploited there than in Western welfare states." A recent Bi-Weekly charged that "the liberation of 1917 has become a new enslavement." Mr. Stone said: "The Soviet Union today is like a huge company town with company unions and a company press." After Mr. Stone's only trip to Russia, in 1956, he wrote: "This is not a good society and it is not led by honest men." That verdict caused 400 readers to cancel their subscriptions.

He has infuriated other readers with his defense of the Warren Commission Report on the assassination of President Kennedy. "I don't believe in the conspiracy theory of history," he explains. "I rejected the rightist theory of a Communist conspiracy, and I couldn't accept the leftist theory of a plot to kill Kennedy."

But the worst shock Mr. Stone has given his readers was his criticism of Israel. He has visited Israel eight times and has written two books favorable to Zionism and Israel's fight for independence. But since the Arab-Israeli War of 1967, he has warned that the new nation is in danger of losing its soul. "A besieged and militaristic Israel, if not overwhelmed from without, will be destroyed spiritually from within," he wrote recently. His solution is compensation and resettlement of Arab refugees in an Arab Palestine that would be federated with Israel, with Jerusalem the joint capital.

No Self-Hate

Several American Jewish magazines have attacked Mr. Stone's stand on Israel, and some subscribers have accused him of feeling self-hate as a Jew. "That's not true," he says. "I feel quite comfortable about being a Jew."

Readers also found surprising his attack on Ralph Ginzburg after the Supreme Court upheld his conviction as a publisher of pornography. Mr. Stone, long a champion of civil rights and First Amendment freedoms, now concedes, "I feel kind of bad about that." He says that what Mr. Ginzburg did "was so mild" compared with the sex publications flooding the country today. "We are getting more civilized about sex; on the other hand, so much of the stuff today is vile and horrible that I hate to have children see it. It's good for kids to learn something behind the barn," Mr. Stone says.

Mr. Stone admits to a generation gap between him and his three children, but it's not the usual kind of parent-child chasm. In this case Mr. Stone is the liberal. His children are political moderates, he says. (But a niece, Kathy Boudin, is a radical. Authorities have been seeking her since an explosion last March that destroyed a suspected bomb factory operated by radicals in Greenwich Village. The explosion killed three persons. Miss Boudin was said to have been seen leaving the site.)

If his own children don't embrace his every thought, some college youths do. His talk at Temple University last April had to be moved to bigger quarters because of an overflow crowd. The Amherst students picked him as commencement speaker (and the college gave him an honorary degree) and Penn's prestigious Philomatean Society chose him to give its annual oration this year, at which time he delighted in pointing out that the same group had turned down his bid for membership when he was a freshman at Penn.

It was decided that a press conference should be held to answer the President's statement on Vietnam and to announce the Oct. 31 rally. The date and time were not set. It was suggested that I. F. Stone or [redacted] be asked to speak. [redacted] will organize this. For information on this, the number to call is 544-1169.

Following, [redacted] reported on his contacts with possible speakers for the rally. In part, he said, that [redacted] (pronounced [redacted] of the Radical Caucus in Government was the only one to definitely say he would. I. F. Stone wants to see who else they get. [redacted] tentatively said, "yes". [redacted] who has been active against the draft is a possibility. He is presently teaching at Mt. St. Mary's, [redacted] said. [redacted] will be in Washington at that time and may be a possibility.

Later, a young man (name not known) said that he and his friend (male) were from the University of Maryland. The one who spoke said that they had rented 12 buses to bring students from the university to the April 15 rally. Only 3 buses were filled. [redacted] had to pay for all 12 and were $2500 in debt as a result. He did not intend to spend his time organizing 3 busloads to attend a rally on Oct. 31. They had gotten 8000 students out on route one, following the shooting of students at Kent State, but he couldn't get them to come to a rally at Sylvan Theatre. He wanted to organize a Convention Against the Government at the University.

He said that he didn't want to plan it to conflict with the Oct. 31 rally. That was the only thing he would do to cooperate. He said, also, that news reporters were on the campus all the time, asking what was going on, what were they planning. The answer is nothing. The students are about 90% apathetic. Two others spoke on this point about the students. Both made the same point. Students are 90% apathetic.

A young girl present, probably a student at American University.

said she is working very hard to organize students there. Tonight, October 8, there is an organizing meeting going on at George Washington University.

Following, [redacted] suggested, in light of the discussion, that we again consider Lafayette Park for the rally. A small number will look ridiculous at Sylvan theatre. The limit at Lafayette Park is supposed to be 500. If we are refused permission, we can get good publicity out of this. Then, too, at Lafayette Park, we are visible from the White House. No permit is required now, she said. You just announce when you will be there. Abe Bloom was advised to take [redacted] of ACLU with him. The ruling of a limit of 500 is arbitrary and should be challenged. A large majority of those present approved of Lafayette Park. [redacted] announced that he would not participate unless it was agreed that if anyone tried to move them off to a different site because of larger numbers, that they would resist with civil disobedience. [redacted] insisted that we want this to be peaceful.

The time decided on for the rally was 1:30 P. M. There would be picketing at the White House from 11 A. M. until the time of the rally.

Following, [redacted] (ph) said he hoped it would be possible for someone from the group to organize government workers. They are more than 100% apathetic. Reatig said that at NIH they have discussion meetings at lunch.

Later, [redacted] announced that there will be guerilla theatre from 10 A. M. to 11 A. M. in front of the Internal Revenue Building and at the Selective Service (or Draft induction) building. It is on G Street, N. W. They will move to a new location this month.

Bloom announced that a fund raising letter has been written. [redacted] and [redacted] have agreed to sign it.

Following, a young man with the [redacted] Chemical Union said that there is a printing press in their office which is not used. He will print the flyers. They are to be on legal size paper. He can use paper from the office there, but not as much as will be required or it will be missed. He can work there all night, if necessary. [redacted] offered to help and to assist with the distribution.

[redacted] gave the following numbers to be called; for information: 628-6834 and 628-5876.

The above is a xeroxed copy of the original informant report.

ISIDORE FEINSTEIN STONE

The Washington Metropolitan Area, District of Columbia edition of the telephone directory lists Stone's residence as 4420 29th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. (WDC), and his Telephone Number as 362-8579. His office is listed at the same address with Telephone Number WO6-1218.

"I. F. Stone's Weekly (now published biweekly)" reflects that Stone publishes "I. F. Stone's Weekly" a news-letter from his office at 4420 29th Street. The July 14, 1970, edition of the Wall Street Journal contains an article concern-ing Stone entitled, "I. F. Stone Achieves Success, Respectable But Keeps Raking Muck". This article describes Stone as a tire-less pamphleteer and senior Leftist at the age sixtytwo coming into success and respectability. The article states that the circulation of Mr. Stone's newsletter has nearly tripled to 60,000 in the past five years and that he is now being read in all the best places, including Capitol Hill and the White House. The article further states that "Who's Who In America" has recently reinstated Stone after dropping him during the McCarthy era.

On March 25, 1968, a source who has furnished reliable information in the past reported that an organization known as the Federal Employees Against The War In Vietnam sponsored a meeting at the Lincoln Memorial Congregational Temple, 1701 11th Street, N. W., WDC, on March 24, 1968. The featured speaker at the meeting was I. F. Stone.

Stone spoke out against the war in Vietnam saying it is immoral and a foolish war. He said that the United States is bogged down in a war that apparently can not be won. Stone also said the Vietnam war is the result of a conspiracy between the Military Bureaucracy and the industrial complex in the United States. During a question and answer session, Stone stressed that being a Government employee is not a bar to being opposed to the Vietnam war.

A second source who has furnished reliable information advised that on October 9, 1968, a meeting was held of peace action groups at the Saint Ignatius Church, Baltimore, Maryland. Among those who spoke was I. F. Stone. Stone cautioned students to think deeply and to act in good faith. He urged students not to be sectarian and not to think that they are always right. He said they were wonderful, but to dig deep.

On May 26, 1969, a third source who has furnished reliable information in the past advised that the Womens Strike For Peace held a fund raising dinner on May 24, 1969.

The Womens Strike For Peace is a National Womens Pacifist Organization in the United States which in the past has demonstrated against nuclear testing, the war in Vietnam, and the draft.

I. F. Stone was the featured speaker at this dinner. Stone stated that Russia and the United States are both imperialist powers. He stated that the talk of reducing the number of United States troops in Vietnam has relaxed the American people about the war. He further stated that elections in this country are controlled by the group in power and that Kennedy would not have won his election except for stuffed ballot boxes in Chicago.

The June 10, 1970, edition of the "Amherst Record," Amherst, Massachusetts, contains an article stating that Stone addressed the commencement exercises on June 5, 1970, at Amherst College. The article states that the Amherst seniors picked Stone as the man they would like to hear at the commencement. The article further states that Stone spoke and received his first college degree, an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from Amherst. The article states that Stone directed comment in his address to the history of war, youth and age, and the battle between good and evil.

The February 6, 1970, edition of the "Daily Hampshire Gazette", North Hampshire, Massachusetts, also contains an article that Stone was free with his praise for the late Dwight D. Eisenhower, and told the graduates to have faith in America.

On October 23, 1970, a fourth source who has furnished reliable information in the past, advised that a moritorium began at Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, and that a rally was held at Kent State University. One of the speakers who addressed the rally was Stone. Stone was critical of the Portage County Grand Jury which recently indicted 25 persons for campus disruptions during May, 1970. He also maintained that the State of Ohio is a backward state and characterized persons being arrested as a result of Portage County's indictments as being "Heroes of Tomorrow".

Stone's residence and place of employment was verified on January 15, 1971, as 4420 29th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., by personal observation of Stone at this address by a representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Two things strike the reader of the 65 articles gathered from those first published in I. F. Stone's Weekly and the New York Review of Books from 1967 through 1970. One is how little change or progress there has been in Washington at war during this time. Then we were not deterred by the unwelcome advice of the scientific world in our determination to build missile bases against the first strike of Russia (or was it China?); today the grave misgivings of England and France concerning the value of supersonic transport planes seem not to have blunted our purpose to make our own. The other conspicuous characteristic of Stone's essays is that they are admirably written. Most of us journalists believe that what we have to say is of greater importance than how we say it. Stone is an artist who makes no distinction between a truth drawn from the continuum of fact and the impression of it in words. An ill-expressed truth is half a lie.

Stone left college in his junior year to go into newspaper work. He was a pre-depression radical. "I might be described, I suppose," he says, "as a premature New Leftist, though I never had the urge to burn anything down . . . Lifelong dissent has more than acclimated me cheerfully to defeat. It has made me suspicious of victory. I feel uneasy at the very idea of a movement. I see every insight degenerating into a dogma, and fresh thoughts freezing into a lifeless party line. Those who set out nobly to be their

Stone thinks that it is impossible to explain to a foreigner the distinction between the Republican and Democratic parties. Who hasn't found himself in the same boat? Both parties, he says, are capitalistic, but generally the Republicans have represented the interests of big business, the Democrats those of small businesses. Ho hum. Stone finds it difficult to convince even himself. "Any division of the two parties between big property and small requires many qualifications. . . . Babbitt—the archetype of the Republican standpatter—was a small businessman, from the Midwest, let it be noted . . . ?"

The first thing to be said about the Vietnam war, Stone observes in this book which is devoted largely to that war and its ramifications within the United States, is that it has become an overriding issue because we are unable to win it. "Successful wars, especially if short and profitable are popular." Thoreau and Lincoln were members of a small minority who disapproved of our war with Mexico, Teddy Roosevelt delighted in what he called "our splendid little war" against Spain. The Philippines, Stone points out, "were our first Vietnam in Asia, Aguinaldo the first Ho Chi Minh we encountered; there was no lack of enthusiasm when we set out, in the slogans then current, to 'help our little brown brother,' and, if he rejected that help, to 'civilize 'em with a Krag.'" Our national conscience would not twinge, Stone believes, if the Diem dictatorship in Vietnam had succeeded, and if Kennedy's "advisers" had been enough to subdue the revolt against it.

Stone proceeds in article after article to show up the hypocrisy, the evil, the bestiality, the pointlessness, the sin of the war. What he does not do, in any of his essays, is to attempt to make a case for the war. Has anybody ever tried? Is there any book or essay by a man otherwise known for his intelligence, humanity and judiciousness, and one, moreover, who is disinterested — neither a politician nor a military man — which has as its thesis that American violence in Asia is either noble or worthwhile? It is said that there are two sides to every question; why does nobody delight in the intellectual discipline of defending Vietnam? Of course there was the magnificent irony of the Iron Mountain report, which showed that peace would not necessarily be disastrous, but the subject is one which even a writer of such great talent as Stone cannot attempt seriously, in a spirit of “however, on the other hand, there is this to be said.”

One article, "They Plead Guilty of Burning Paper Instead of Children," published Oct. 21, 1968, must today give Stone especial satisfaction. Now, when the trial of the Catonsville Nine has been enhanced by art and is a popular play in New York, there are a hundred writers who can and do write discerningly about it and the questions it asks. I do not recall that the trial itself caused widespread discussion; if it did, recognition of the event in 1968 was far less than recognition of the show in 1970. Stone, however, was one who saw the value of Berrigan's story when the priest was living it, not writing it. The journalist wrote about it brilliantly at the time, prophetically seeing it as "living theatre" and a "morality play."

Stone At SMC Gathering: 'Must Drive Truth Home'

by Charles Venin
News Editor

Noted journalist J. F. Stone told a group of GW students in the Ballroom last night that "A lot of people applauded the deaths of students at Jackson State because a lot of people are against students."

Stone was the main speaker at the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) "Remember Kent and Jackson" moratorium rally. The SMC had publicized the rally throughout the city and anticipated a large turn-out. But due to the University's "students only" building use policy, only 100 people showed up to hear the speakers (see story below).

In protest of the University's policy two scheduled speakers, Charles Cheng, assistant to the president of the Washington Teacher's Union, and Charles Stephenson, a member of the Third World Task Force to End the War, refused to speak.

Cheng said that as a member of the Teachers' Union, he fights repression of teachers and the University's policy is "blatantly repressive." "I cannot," he said, "in good conscience speak with you tonight. I do not wish to speak under these conditions at the George Washington University."

Marilyn Hammond, a member of the Kent State Legal Defense Committee, spoke about the four students who were killed a year ago yesterday at the University. "As students," she commented, "our sense of power has been strengthened since four of us were shot. We have come back together this spring to carry on the anti-war movement."

SMC National Organizational Secretary Jay Ressler damned GW for its current building use policy. "I don't ever remember going to a campus and being insulted as I was tonight. It is the most ridiculous thing I have ever heard of."

"Instead of shutting down the University," Ressler added, "students should rally to open it up and use the university to further their actions in anti-war protests."

Ressler attacked Metropolitan Police Chief Jerry Wilson, charging that he is "guilty of violating the civil liberties of all Washingtonians as well as all anti-war demonstrators."

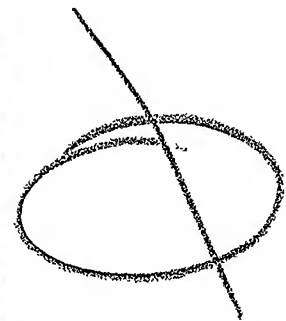

"We must stand up to the Administration's harrassment," Ressler said, "because we all know where the violence in this country comes from - Nixon. He makes war on the people of Indochina, he is responsible for the four students killed at Kent State."

Stone, who is editor-in-chief of "J. F. Stone's Bi-Weekly Newsletter" centered his comments around the Kent State and Jackson State killings. "Six lives," he said, "got Nixon to promise to get out of Cambodia in 30 days. Part of our task is not to let these crimes go forgotten."

Stone explained that campus unrest is not a new thing and we have only to remind the "older people" of the University of Mississippi incident of 1962. "This was the biggest campus disorder in our country."

"Every ruling class in history - even revolutionary classes," Stone said, "falls back on an outline of conspiracy. For a better America all we have to do is drive the truth home and not give up the struggle. Somehow we have to shame the Department of Justice into punishing those who fired the shots at Kent and Jackson State."

I. F. Stone Folds It Up

Star Photographer Ken Heinen

I. F. STONE

By JACK KNEECE
Star Staff Writer

David Eisenhower and Spiro Agnew won't have irreverent anti-establishment journalist I. F. Stone to kick around any longer—not his biweekly newspaper, anyway.

Stone says he is stopping publication of his 19-year-old, one-man paper, I. F. Stone's Bi-Weekly, after this month.

Stone, who cut a wide swath across journalism with his piercing stories—many gleaned from a super-careful, piercing is as well known by the people who don't like him as by those who do.

David Eisenhower refused to attend his Amherst graduation because Stone was the commencement speaker. And Vice President Agnew said the newspaper published for Stone's 70,000 subscribers was "another strident voice of illiberalism."

Moving to Review

Isidor (Izzy) Feinstein Stone, 63, says he is taking his talents as an exposé of government ineptitude to The New York Review.

In a letter that began appearing in the mail boxes of subscribers yesterday, Stone said, "I do not feel it would be sensible to try and carry on as a one-man newspaper and kind of one-man ombudsman any longer."

"The compulsion to cover the universe in four pages has become too heavy a burden."

Stone's newspaper, always has been largely a one-man operation, although he says he has been ably assisted over the years by his wife Esther.

Now, with the paper folding, subscribers to the Bi-Weekly will get copies of the Review, for which Stone will be writing as a contributing editor. And subscribers to both will get an extension of the Review.

Mencken Took Interest

Stone was a young man working for the Philadelphia Record over to anyone in order to maintain the paper.

"I did. I approached several really good guys. But they turned me down. I don't want to say who they were, but I think they thought it was a little too risky."

Stone was a young man working for the Philadelphia Record in 1931 and an avid reader of The American Mercury published and edited by one of Stone's iconoclastic predecessors, H. L. Mencken, along with George Jean Nathan.

Stone said he thought the Mercury might be interested in a critical piece about then Pennsylvania Gov. Gifford Pinchot and he submitted a manuscript, unsolicited.

Mencken liked it and bought it for $150. A new iconoclast was born.

"The wonderful thing about Mencken was that he didn't just buy names. He bought from unknowns. He was not only a marvelous editor but he took an interest in young men like myself working out in the sticks," Stone said.

He didn't meet Mencken in person until years later at a convention, he said.

Stone said he started his publication "because I was forced to" in 1952 when The New York Daily Compass folded. He had been a reporter, columnist and editorial writer for a series of New York and New Jersey newspapers prior to that.

"Precarious Venture"

With an initial subscription list of 5,300 persons, Stone began what he called in an interview today "the most precarious venture of my life." He said it was ironic that "the most precarious undertaking of my career eventually gave me more security than any other."

He said it would be more difficult to try the same thing today, postal rates being what they are. He said he was able to mail the newspaper—which began life as a weekly—for one-eighth of a cent at first.

He said the paper sputtered along for about a year at the same level, then began to climb majestically until it reached the current peak of 70,000 subscribers.

Comments on Critics

About his critics, Stone is delightfully nonplussed. "David Eisenhower is a silly kid."

All the other liberal newspapers were jealous because Agnew singled me out. They were jealous because they weren't given all that free advertising.

About Eisenhower, people used to criticize me for writing good things about David Eisenhower's grandfather.

Started at 14

Stone said he began his love affair with the newspaper business when "I was a kid of 14." He started a small paper called "The Progress," using some pre-set type bought from a now defunct outfit called the Western Newspaper Guild.

"You had to buy the type already set—called boiler plate—and cut it with a special saw to fit."

"But my father (a Russian Jewish immigrant) made me stop when it began interfering with my school work."

Stone has scooped the daily press on many occasions—on stories ranging from underground nuclear testing to more current criticism.

He said he antagonized some of his more left-wing readers when he returned from a trip to the Soviet Union and wrote of it, "This is not a good society and it is not led by honest men."

Assassination View

Stone was criticized by some for his backing of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of John F. Kennedy when theories were rampant about a conspiracy. But he said he merely was applying his rationale against witch-hunts and paranoia among the liberals as he always had done against the far right.

"Besides, you had to believe in three conspiracies and I found that hard to swallow. You had to believe in the basic conspiracy to kill the President. Then you had to believe in the conspiracy to kill his killer. Then you had to believe in the conspiracy to hush up both murders."

About his criticism of the Israelis after the June 1967 Mideast war:

"Well, I just believe that Israel's future is in reconciliation and that this reconciliation depends on some measure of justice for Palestinian and Arab refugees."

Stone said he has "a couple of books I want to do" and that he is looking forward to the luxury of spending more time on his stories than he used to.

"You want to know who I think is the best newspaperman in town—the Star's own Mary McGrory. That's the honest to God truth. When I see her covering a story I get nervous because I know she'll get things I want. Make sure you put that in your story."

A letter was received from I. F. STONE's 'BI-Weekly', 4420 29th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20008. This letter advised that "after 19 years of independent reporting and publishing, I will be discontinuing writing and publishing I. F. STONE's 'BI-Weekly' as of the first of the year". The letter advised that in order to fulfill that part of your subscription to the 'BI-Weekly', still outstanding as of January 1, 1972, "I have made arrangements for you to receive 'The New York Review' of books (which is also published twice monthly). The subscription price of that publication is $10 a year twice that of the 'Bi-Weekly' and, therefore, you will receive one issue of 'The Review' for two issues of the 'Bi-Weekly' as long as your subscription last".

WFO will forward copies of "The Review" to the Bureau upon our receipt of same.

I. F. Stone, Publisher

A-14

I. F. Stone, who is about to change journalistic roles, may well be the only Marxist ever to make good as a capitalist in the fiercely competitive jungle of American free enterprise journalism. He was a good, if somewhat unconventional, reporter and editorial writer when he worked for the publishers of a number of Philadelphia and New York newspapers, handling pretty nearly every kind of assignment. When a succession of these newspapers were wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal and managerial policy, he decided, exactly like one of Horatio Alger's heroes, to go into business for himself. In 1953, he founded "I. F. Stone's Weekly"—which subsequently became "I. F. Stone's Bi-Weekly." He started with 5,300 subscribers and a lot of nerve. He is going to end his highly successful publishing venture this week with a circulation of more than 70,000.

With a generous infusion of help from his wife, who served as the publication's circulation manager and assisted him in wrestling with production, promotion and the rest, I. F. Stone was, for nearly 20 years, the sole proprietor, publisher, editor and principal reporter for his paper. He brought to the role a remarkable allergy to cant and pretentiousness in public life. There was nothing detached about I. F. Stone's reporting. He was essentially a muckraker, a crusader and a polemicist. But there were, at the same time, qualities of thoroughness, fairness and insightfulness that made his work almost solid, illuminating and a goad to all his competitors.

Izzy Stone had trouble for many years with his hearing; to make up for it, he read indefatigably and omnivorously. Instead of relying on gossip, he combed debates in the Congressional Record and discovered nuggets of information in obscure committee hearings and reports. In his polemics, he was no doubt sometimes right and sometimes wrong; but he was invariably independent; always exclusively his own boss, always moved by conviction and by private conscience. He will, of course, continue to work in the same way in the column he is going to write for The New York Review. We wish him luck and continuing effectiveness.

In view of STONE's occupation as a journalist, he is in a position to substantially influence others. In January, 1968, STONE agreed to be a sponsor for the Washington Area Committee for the Abolition of The House Un-American Activities Committee. In April, 1967, STONE's name was on the mailing list of "The Worker". In December, 1966, STONE's name listed among current members of Executive Committee, Emergency Civil Liberties Committee.

CONFIDENTIAL

ISIDORE FEINSTEIN STONE

Washington Metropolitan Area, District of Columbia edition of the telephone directory, lists I. F. Stone as residing at 4420 29th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. (WDC), telephone number 362-8579.

The December 7, 1971, issue of "The Washington Post", a WDC daily newspaper, on page A-2, carried an article titled "I.F. Stone Folds it Up." This article stated that Stone says he is stopping publication of his nineteen year old, one man paper, I.F. Stone's Bi-Weekly, after this month. According to the article, Stone will be writing as contributing editor to The New York Review of Books.

A first source advised on April 30, 1971, that I.F. Stone was the featured speaker at the Washington Area Peace Action Coalition (WAPAC) fund raiser which was held on April 17, 1971. Stone told the audience of about 400 people that he considers the Vietnam War to be immoral. Stone stated that he fully backs all anti-war groups, and blames the war on United States imperialism with both the Democratic and Republican Parties equally guilty.

WAPAC is the local WDC affiliate of the National Peace Action Coalition (NPAC). NPAC is an umbrella anti-war organization formed at Cleveland, Ohio, in June, 1970. The stated basic objective of NPAC is to involve masses of people, including labor unions, GIs, and the black community, in the struggle to effect the immediate withdrawal of all United States forces from Southeast Asia and the abolition of the draft through orderly and peaceful tactics.

A second source advised that on April 22, 1971, it was determined that I.F. Stone is an advisor of the District of Columbia Defense Committee, and evidently makes suggestions in connection with their activities.

The District of Columbia Defense Committee, a local affiliate of the Harrisburg Defense Committee, has been organized to raise funds in connection with the trial at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, of individuals indicted in connection with an alleged plot to blow up heating tunnels in WDC, and kidnap a high Government official.

A third source advised that on May 5, 1971, a meeting was held at the new student center of George Washington University, to commemorate the deaths of Kent State students by National Guard gunfire, a year earlier. One of the speakers was I.F. Stone. Stone's speech frequently criticized the FBI, and the style in which they have conducted different investigations in the past. Stone said, however, that some credit was deserved in the investigation into Kent State by the FBI, since they have proved that there was no sniper involved.

The May 6, 1971, issue of "Hatchet", the George Washington University student newspaper, on page one carried an article titled "Stone At SMC Gathering: Must Drive Truth Home." This article advised that noted journalist I.F. Stone told a group of George Washington University students in the ballroom last night that "a lot of people applauded the deaths of students at Jackson State because a lot of people are against students." Stone was the main speaker at the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) "Remember Kent and Jackson" moratorium rally. The SMC had publicized the rally throughout the city and anticipated a large turn out. But due to the university's "students only" building use policy, only 100 people showed up to hear the speakers.

The SMC to End the War in Vietnam is controlled by the Socialist Workers Party (SWP) and its youth affiliate, Young Socialist Alliance. SMC initiates and supports public demonstrations against the war in Southeast Asia.

The SWP has been designated pursuant to Executive Order 10450.

A fourth source advised that on November 6, 1971, I.F. Stone spoke at a demonstration held at the Elipse, WDC, which was sponsored by NPAC. Stone spoke out in favor of President Nixon's wage and price freeze.

Stone's residence was verified on February 5, 1972, by a representative of the FBI utilizing a suitable pretext.

FBI Checks on Citizens, but Not Drugs

By Jack Anderson

With crime running rampant across the country, the FBI has tied up countless agents prying into the private lives of political figures, black leaders, movie stars, football players, newsmen and other prominent Americans.

Indeed, no American who speaks his mind is altogether safe from the all-seeing FBI.

FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover, the old curmudgeon of law enforcement, fiercely resisted a White House suggestion that he spare a few hundred agents to crack down on drug abuses. But he can spare agents to snoop into the sex habits, business affairs and political pursuits of individuals who aren't even remotely involved in illegal activity.

Hoover's gumshoes have loaded FBI files with titillating tidbits about such diverse figures as movie actors Marlon Brando and Harry Belafonte, football heroes Joe Namath and Lance Rentzel, boxing champs Joe Louis and Muhammad Ali, black leaders

Ralph Abernathy and Roy Innis.

It's no secret that the FBI hounded the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the apostle of racial brotherhood and nonviolent protest. We have seen FBI reports on his political activities and sex life.

Now the FBI is watching his widow, Coretta King. As evidence of what the FBI considers suspicious activity, here's a typical excerpt from her secret file:

"On February 18, 1970, a confidential source advised he had learned that Coretta Scott King, widow of Martin Luther King Jr., contemplated pursuing in the near future a program of voter registration in several Southern states."

Persecution Complex

In Joe Louis's case, the FBI went to pains to report on a mental breakdown, which led to his confinement in a Denver hospital.

The FBI keeps a particularly hostile eye on newsmen who are critical of government policies. The undefatigable muckraker I. F. Stone, for example, is kept under regular surveillance.

"Stone's residence," his secret file shows, "was verified on February 5, 1972, by a representative of the FBI utilizing a suitable pretext."

The most suspicious notation was placed in his file in 1966. "On February 11, 1966, at 1:09 p.m." states a surveillance report, "the subject was observed to meet Oleg D. Kalugin in front of Harvey's Restaurant, 1107 Connecticut Avenue NW, Washington, D.C. Together, they subsequently entered Harvey's Restaurant."

The FBI added darkly that Kalugin was the "press secretary" at the Soviet embassy.

The file on one famous movie actor, not mentioned above, contains nothing but rumors about his sex life. Indeed, the file begins by acknowledging that the actor "has not been the subject of an FBI investigation."

Nevertheless, the FBI has compiled a full dossier on the actor.

"During 1965," begins the FBI summary, "a confidential informant reported that several years ago while he was in New York he had an 'affair' with movie star . . . The informant states that from personal knowledge he knew that (the actor) was a homosexual.

"The belief was expressed that by 'personal knowledge' the informant meant he had personally indulged in homosexual acts with (the star) or had witnessed or received the information from individuals who had done so.

"On another occasion, information was received by the Los Angeles office of the FBI that it was common knowledge in the motion picture industry that . . . was suspected of having homosexual tendencies.

"It is to be noted in May, 1961, a confidential source in New York also stated that . . . definitely was a homosexual.

"Our files contain no additional pertinent information identifiable with (the actor). The fingerprint files . . . contain no arrest data identifiable with (him)."

(U) On Wednesday July 12, 1972 the Democratic Party held the third day of its National Convention at the Convention Center in Miami Beach, while the Miami Conventions Coalition pursued its program of actions and demonstrations in support of specific demands and policies. (C)

(U) By Wednesday afternoon the throng of "non-delegates" at Flamingo Park had increased to about 1500, which represented about three-fourths of the capacity of the camping area. To everyone's great annoyance a swarm of little flies had descended on the Miami area, and the tiny creatures were particularly in evidence in the park. Among the new faces at Flamingo Park were [redacted] of the Conspiracy 7; [redacted] formerly of New York University SDS, who was at the SDS table soliciting support for its anti-racism bill; [redacted] of PLP and CAIM at Columbia University; and a girl of Latin American ancestry who had also attended CAIM meetings. She remarked that the delegation from Columbia University was quite small and that most people preferred to wait for the Republican Convention in August. At the SWP booth was an undergraduate from Columbia who had been active from April onward in SMC, which otherwise is quite small on that campus. (C)

(U) Members of the different factions and organizations were arguing and disputing, while the rock music and the chants of the Hari Krishna enthusiasts that filled the air gave the park the aspect of a summer picnic and carnival. The gay contingent, which was often confronted by the Jesus freaks at Flamingo Park, was composed of individuals whose physical appearance was so strange that they would have been worthy additions to a teratological museum. Vietnam Veterans Against the War stayed somewhat aloof from the rest of the crowd; its members were slightly older, mainly in the 23-27 range, and they seemed more deliberate in their conduct at the park. Many of the younger individuals in the crowd looked as if they did not quite know what to do in this setting. Not a few of them simply wandered off to the swimming pool or the basketball and tennis courts and forgot completely about politics. The Jesus freaks were later reported to contain several members of a strong-arm squad that had harrassed the gay community in Los Angeles on several occasions. (C)

(U) About 4:00 p.m. it was bruited about that a group of demonstrators had gone to the Doral Hotel to confront McGovern in person. And in fact, the lobby of the Doral was filled, though not exclusively, with young people who had come from Flamingo Park to make their demands on the prospective candidate. Members of the splinter groups had even brought along their leaflets and petitions and were distributing them in all directions. Upstairs, in the McGovern offices on the third floor, staff members were barring the doors to demonstrators attempting to infiltrate the inner sanctum. [redacted] how made (C)

(U) his reentry on the scene, claiming that he could not obtain the room at the Carillon because the desk demanded $50 in cash in advance. He said that he had stayed up all night and even asserted that he had lunch with [redacted] and I.F. Stone that afternoon. After he spent some time in the press room at the end of the corridor, he agreed with his friend from Columbia to take a room at the Eden Roc Hotel which would cost $10 a day for himself, his friend and [redacted] (C)

(U) And so on the early evening of July 12 [redacted] moved their equipment from the Barcelona Hotel to Room 1430 at the Eden Roc. When unpacked, the items appeared to consist mainly of equipment for making and editing audio tapes, although there were a few small television monitors. [redacted] professed to have been in many places in Miami Beach, taping interviews with demonstrators, staff members working for various candidates, and of course the celebrities present in great numbers. Two in particular whose names came up in his conversation quite often were Warren Beatty, who was allegedly fund-raising for McGovern, and [redacted] of the disappointed feminist and pro-abortion faction at the Convention. (C)

(U) [redacted] being quite exhausted, fell asleep on one of the beds in the room, while his friends watched the nominating speeches and then the voting on television. At 11:59 p.m. the Illinois delegation cast the decisive vote: McGovern was the party's nominee. Shortly after this [redacted] and his associates walked over to the press room at the Dorai, where they met, among others, [redacted] of the Washington Post, who remembered two of them from the days of the Columbia uprising. All around them there was rejoicing in the McGovern camp, although a few voices were already warning that a tough and uncertain fight lay ahead. The question now was: Who would be the Vice Presidential nominee? And so, to be ready for the events of the fourth and closing day of the Convention, [redacted] and his associates returned to the room at the Eden Roc where they would spend the night. (C)

On Saturday January 20, 1973 the National Peace Action Coalition (NPAC) and the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice (PCPJ) sponsored a joint march and rally in Washington, D.C. that was scheduled to coincide with the Second Inauguration of President Richard M. Nixon. The slogan for the demonstration was "End the Bombing! Stop the War!", which participants were free to interpret as they chose, since the sponsoring organizations were never in agreement on the central demand. NPAC remained true to its earlier motto "U.S. Out Now!", while PCPJ called for immediate signing of the draft agreements that had been reached in Paris on October 20, 1972.

Not a few of the demonstrators, as it turned out, were quite unaware of the rift between the two organizations, though a majority were probably in favor of signing the agreements. The opposition to this line came essentially from the NPAC and SMC organizers and those under their influence.

By 11:30 a.m. a large crowd had begun to form at the eastern side of the Lincoln Memorial, while a steady line of demonstrators filed along both sides of the reflecting pool. There were many banners of different sizes and colors, for the most part identifying some local organization or chapter that was participating in the march.

About noon one of the marshals announced over a bullhorn the positions of the various contingents in the march. Pennsylvania, New York and New England were assigned positions N, O, and P, which were marked on standards carried by marshals in the procession. The New York contingent was relatively small, but this was explained by the fact that the buses and trains carrying New Yorkers to the demonstration were late in unloading their passengers. From Philadelphia there came a large number of demonstrators, including groups of striking teachers from that city's public schools.

While the temperature was close to 40 degrees, the wind that blew steadily and the clouds that obstructed the sun's rays made the march something of an ordeal. For reasons that were not quite clear, it took a solid hour for the rear of the column to start moving. By that time the marchers had been joined by some 5000-6000 people that had already marched with Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW) from Arlington National Cemetery. Among them were Grauler and Fred Abramowitz, of the Columbia Anti-Imperialist Movement (CAIM).

When the column finally started forward, it made the distance from the Lincoln Memorial to the North side of the Washington Monument in swift time and without mishap. The marshals played a comparatively minor role in keeping the crowd moving and out of mischief. It was impossible from a point on the ground to see one end or the other of the column, but everyone thought that at least 50,000 people were involved--a larger turnout than most would have believed likely two weeks earlier.

By the time the end of the procession had reached the site of the rally, the speeches were already in progress. The topics were familiar to the audience, but there was some infighting between supporters of the NPAC and PCPJ positions, each accusing the other of "betraying the Vietnamese people", playing Nixon's game, and "aiding the Stalinist bureaucracy in its treachery to the working class".

Present on the lawn that ran down from the Washington Monument to Constitution Avenue were [redacted] of CAIM, with several others who had come by car from New York; [redacted] of SWP, who said that his bus had been two hours late in leaving New York, and who took pictures of part of the Gay contingent, which allegedly numbered 900; [redacted] of Pittsburgh YWLL; [redacted] formerly of the December 4th Movement in New York City; and [redacted] of New York SMC, now reportedly active in another city.

Among the speechmakers was Juan Gonzalez, of the Young Lords, formerly of SDS at Columbia in its heyday of 1968-69. He of course sought to connect Nixon's policies in Vietnam with "the oppression of black, Latin and other Third World peoples throughout the globe". I.F. Stone, the radical journalist who now writes for New York Review of Books, spoke to denounce the Administration for its arbitrary and unconstitutional handling of the Vietnam War. Most of the demonstrators were by now interested only in keeping warm and finding something to eat near the Monument grounds. Surprisingly enough, there were few vendors of food on hand, but many people hawking or distributing leaflets and radical newspapers. Bonfires were made in conveniently located trashcans, and a large fire was started on the south side of the Monument at its base. This act ultimately provoked the intervention of mounted police, but there were no casualties. A number of American flags were torn down from the poles surrounding the Monument and then unceremoniously burned.

By the time the speeches ended at 5:00 p.m., the wind and cold had already dispersed many of the demonstrators, and the rest were glad to scurry to shelter or to their waiting buses. A breakaway march that had been quietly discussed in some circles never materialized.

Of the future little could be said: the war might end in a week, or might continue for another year. The general feeling was that the negotiations had to produce a result in a fairly short time or else break down completely, and that the decision--one way or the other--would be Nixon's, not that of the crowd standing in the cold south of Constitution Avenue. It was also implicitly felt that this would be the last major demonstration for a long, long time.

Although it was only an impression, it seemed that most of the participants in this action were newcomers to the antiwar movement, not veterans of the--by now legendary--demonstrations and strikes of 1968-69, or the campus strike of May 1970. They were people for whom "going to Washington" to demonstrate was a novel experience, not a repetition of a familiar proceeding. The crowd was almost entirely white, apart from a number of Negroes who had been attracted to the SDS and YWLL contingents by the emphasis placed on "fighting racism" in these organizations; it was mainly young, collegiate or professional in background, and free of the Weatherman types that had been active during previous mass demonstrations in the capital.

About 7:30 that evening, All Souls' Unitarian Church, at 16th and Harvard Streets, Washington 20009, was filled with demonstrators waiting for their buses to pick them up on the return leg of their trip. There was a group from Minneapolis SDS, including [redacted] of PLP, who reported that they had been almost 24 hours on the road. Also wandering through the corridor was [redacted] of PLP, another veteran of the Columbia uprising of 1968. SDS had brought a large quantity of material for a conference on racism that had been scheduled for Howard University the next day, but apparently the buses were to leave that night for destinations as far apart as Boston and Iowa.

NPAC had distributed leaflets at the rally announcing a joint NPAC-SMC Conference in Washington the weekend of February 23-25, but no one could be certain of what the situation would be at that time. PCPJ had no long-range plans or activities that were announced. SDS would obviously continue its "struggle against campus racism" which had little if anything to do with the war.

The best estimate agreed upon by those who had participated in the march and rally was that there were 60,000 demonstrators coming from points as distant as Maine, Atlanta and Minneapolis. Only a few minor groups such as the National Caucus of Labor Committees boycotted the action. The hostility between those groups that did participate was purely verbal. The demonstration of January 20, 1973 was, however, in the consciousness of those present an implicit end to an era in American radicalism.

Protests During Presidential
Inaugural Ceremonies, 1973

The PCPJ is self-described as an organization consisting of over 100 organizations using massive civil disobedience to combat war, racism, poverty and repression. Its National Office is located at 156 5th Avenue, New York City, Room 527.

The NPAC was founded in 1970 by members of the SWP. Its basic objective is to unite masses of people, including labor unions, GIs and the black community in the struggle to end United States intervention in Southeast Asia through orderly and peaceful tactics.

The SWP has been designated pursuant to Executive Order 10450.

The SMC publicly describes itself as the largest organization of American antiwar youth. It organizes mass actions to fight for the total, immediate, and unconditional withdrawal of all United States troops and material from Southeast Asia. SMC is controlled by the SWP, which has been designated pursuant to Executive Order 10450.

The VVAW is a national veterans organization whose first stated objective is to end the war in Vietnam.

The YWLL is a front organization of the Communist Party, USA. It was formed as a Marxist-Leninist Youth Group in February, 1970.

Protests During Presidential Inaugural Ceremonies, 1973

The Young Lords Party headquartered in New York City, according to its 13 Point Program and Platform, is a revolutionary political party fighting for the liberation of all oppressed people, seeking self-determination for Puerto Ricans' liberation and who believe armed self-defense and armed struggle are the only means to liberation.

SDS was founded during June, 1962, at Port Huron, Michigan, and in the 1960's functioned as the leading New Left campus-based student organization in the United States. From a stance of "participatory democracy," the SDS moved to a radical-revolutionary position. It maintained a national office at 1608 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois, until February, 1970. Internal factionalism during 1969 produced three main factions: Weatherman, Revolutionary Youth Movement (RYM), and Worker Student Alliance (WSA). The Weatherman and RYM no longer consider themselves associated with the SDS. The WSA faction continues to use the name SDS.

The PLP was founded in 1962 by individuals expelled from the Communist Party, USA, for following the Chinese communist line. Its objective is the establishment of a militant working class movement based on Marxism-Leninism and MAO Tse-tung thought.

Protests During Presidential Inaugural Ceremonies, 1973

Weatherman, formerly a faction of SDS, controlled the SDS National Office from June, 1969, until its closing in February, 1970. Weatherman then entered an underground status and adopted a tactic of "strategic sabotage," with police and military installations designated as primary targets.

The December 4th Movement was formed at Columbia University in the Fall of 1970 from former members of SDS.

The Columbia Anti-Imperialist Movement is a coalition of almost all "left-wing political organizations" on the Columbia University campus, according to "The Main Trent", December 7, 1971 issue, its official newsletter.

The National Caucus of Labor Committees consists of various labor committees throughout the country, one which is the New York Labor Committee (NYLC).

The NYLC which was expelled from the SDS in 1968, seeks to identify itself with the American Worker. The NYLC believes that in the future the American Worker will emerge as a separate and distinct social class which will become oriented towards a socialist America.

Radical becomes respectable: I.F. Stone

By Anne Pautler
DB Staff Writer

"I knew this program would turn into a pogrom, I'd be slandered and accused of respectability," political journalist I.F. Stone told an audience Saturday in the Grand Ballroom.

The weekend University Extension program, "I.F. Stone: Conversation and Commentary," was in itself evidence that the slanderous accusation might well stick. Stone has become not only respectable but respected -- for perhaps the first time in his 50-odd years as a newspaperman.

Stone spent 19 years as the writer-editor-publisher of I.F. Stone's Weekly, "a radical weekly from a radical point of view." The Weekly, one of the few vocal critics of McCarthyism, survived the fifties to earn both the enmity of Spiro T. Agnew and a readership numbering 70,000. The Weekly stopped publishing in 1971, but Jerry Bruck's popular documentary "I.F. Stone's Weekly" has converted Stone into something of a folk hero.

Not an oracle

"It's a big pain in the neck to be regarded as an oracle," Stone said Friday at a press conference. "I'm not an oracle and there are no easy answers. In fact, to most of the basic questions there are no answers at all."

His lack of easy answers notwithstanding, Stone had a great deal to say about newspapers, both to Saturday's audience and to the press.

"I think most of the papers in the country are lousy," Stone said, listing the Baltimore Sun, New York Times, and St. Louis Post-Dispatch as among the few exceptions. "The Los Angeles Times has become an awful lot better -- but there are very few news pages."

"The average American is very poorly informed," according to Stone. He placed much of the blame for this on the commercial nature of American media. "They're basically concerned with merchandising. . . The news is something you put in when unfortunately God didn't give you enough advertising."

Stone called investigative reporting "a new phrase" rather than a new idea. "A reporter is a man who asks a lot of questions," Stone said. "If a reporter's not an investigator, what the hell is he? A re-writer of press releases?"

Carrying on a soliloquy

Because the Weekly was his own publication, Stone himself enjoyed complete freedom as a reporter and writer. He characterized his work on the Weekly as "carrying on a soliloquy," as well as "an attempt to search out the truth."

"The whole truth is something you'll never get. The search for it is very wonderful," Stone told his audience.

A gnome-like figure in brown checked shirt and red tie, Stone asserted that "After a lifetime of searching, you find yourself with a handful of banalities."

But neither his lifetime nor his search is finished. Stone now pursues the truth in library stacks, brushing up on his Greek and studying the philosophers. He plans to write a book on freedom of thought and expression.
